Monument. The Sept. 11 Memorial Museum will be dedicated today.

For 13 years, the streets around the World Trade Center have been surrounded with chain-link fences. Those fences come down today, opening up the area where more than one million visitors have already visited the footprints of the twin towers — waterfalls ensconced where the buildings once stood.

After years of delays and financial woes, the National Sept. 11 Memorial & Museum opens its doors to the public on May 21, offering access to artifacts, images and documented memories of the attacks that killed 2,983 people.

The day before President Barack Obama visits the site for its dedication, city leaders and family members gathered at the museum to preview its grand opening.

Former Mayor Michael Bloomberg, who was elected to his first term weeks after the attacks, called the completion of the $700 million memorial project a reminder for the city, country and world alike.

Witnesses and family members alike donated much of the content within the museum, capturing stories of survivors and loved ones lost after the terrorist attacks.

The underground facilities also include a private, city-managed repository for the 7,930 unidentified fragmentary remains of 9/11 victims — an idea that unsettled a group of family members upset about the decision to place the remains in the museum instead of a tomb.

However, some family members called the move appropriate. Charles G. Wolf lost his wife Katherine only two weeks after she started a job at the WTC's South Tower.

While there were no remains of his wife, Wolf — who participated in the museum's family advisory council — said that the idea to place the unidentified human remains at the site of the attack was not the museum's but the families.

"This was our idea," he said. "So anyone who tries to tell you that we weren't consulted is wrong."

Despite the complications, the now-complete memorial represents a feat Bloomberg praised as the culmination of more than a decade's worth of thought and work.

"It's a solemn day," he said, "but it's also a day that should put, if not smiles on our faces, satisfaction in our hearts."

Future generations

"It will help ensure that all future generations know what happened on that day and why it happened, so they will never again allow the country to ignore those who wish to destroy us."

Michael Bloomberg

Inside the museum

The museum's primary exhibition spaces are buried 700 feet below street level, housing some 110,000 square feet that 9/11 Memorial CEO and president Joe Daniels described as a "living testament to our nation's resiliency."

- Architects and curators designed the space so that it would tell, not only the events of Sept. 11, but also the personal stories of those who died and survived the attacks. Timelines of events guide visitors through the days before and after the towers fell.
- Boxes of tissues are spread throughout the exhibit.

Controversy

Voicing concerns

Ahead of the museum's opening, critics voiced concern over a section of an exhibit detailing the terrorist group al-Qaeda.

Some Muslim leaders are worried that a video detailing how al-Qaeda came to be, might not distance the faith from an extremist few.

Paula Grant Berry, a member of the family advisory council, said the video underwent careful consideration.

"We in no way want to convey that the perpetrators were anything but extreme fundamentalist and not in any way representative of an enormous religion in this world," Berry explained.

Transportation

L, M lines to receive boost

L and M riders will soon see some relief from overcrowded trains and a bump in weekend service, the MTA announced on Wednesday.

The MTA plans on increasing service to the lines this fall due to increased ridership demands.

"Among the changes is a significant increase in L weekend service, which will decrease wait times for customers as well as increase capacity on a line that continues to see ridership growth, most notably during off-peak hours," said NYC Transit president Carmen Bianco. "Ridership is at an all-time high, including records for weekend ridership. These are customers who rely on us for all of their transportation needs, both work and play, and we are trying to meet that demand with our available resources."

Implementation of the changes will cost approximately $1.7 million annually, the MTA said. METRO

Infastructure. Obama speaks at NY Bridge

President Barack Obama is pushing an infastructure plan. / GETTY IMAGES

President Barack Obama appeared at the aging Tappan Zee Bridge on Wednesday to chide Congress for failing to approve legislation for needed road projects.

With Congress facing a fight on how to replenish a federal fund for road construction, Obama urged lawmakers to pass a transportation bill to pay for an estimated 112,000 highway projects and 5,600 transit projects under way this year.

Without passage, work could grind to a halt, putting at risk almost 700,000 jobs in the peak summer construction season.

"If they don't act by the end of the summer, federal funding for transportation projects will run out," Obama said. "There will be no money, the cupboard will be bare."

Obama has offered a four-year, $302 billion transport spending plan, paid for by ending some business tax breaks. REUTERS

In Brooklyn

Armed robber runs off with cash from dollar store

An unidentified man dashed out with hundreds of dollars from a Brooklyn dollar store after flashing a gun at a cashier.

Police said that the suspect walked into the Family Dollar store at 2184 Clarendon Road in the Flatbush section at around 4 p.m. on Tuesday.

The suspect pulled what police described as a gray or black firearm from a blue New York Rangers drawstring bag and showed it to the cashier. He then demanded money from the register. The worker handed over approximately $300 in cash.

Detention. Pentagon considers options for Chelsea Manning

The U.S. military is considering options for the detention of a transgender soldier who is serving time in prison for turning over secret files to WikiLeaks.

The Associated Press on Wednesday reported that defense officials were trying to transfer Chelsea Manning, who seeks to live as a woman, to a civilian prison to facilitate that treatment.

"No decision to transfer Private Manning to a civilian detention facility has been made, and any such decision will, of course, properly balance the soldier's medical needs with our obligation to ensure Private Manning remains behind bars," Rear Admiral John Kirby, a Pentagon spokesman, said in a statement.

Defense officials said that one option under consideration was transferring Manning to a civilian prison.

In April, a U.S. judge ruled that Manning, who had gone by the name Bradley, could legally use the name Chelsea. Manning was born as a man but identifies as a woman.

Manning is serving her sentence in all-male detention facilities at the U.S. Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

Kirby, in a statement issued to reporters during a visit by Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel to Saudi Arabia, also said that Hagel had approved a request from the U.S. Army to assess "potential treatment options for inmates diagnosed with gender dysphoria," which refers to individuals who experience discontent with their gender.

Manning has repeatedly stated her desire to live as a woman and has requested hormone replacement therapy in prison, but so far Army officials have denied those requests. REUTERS

Last year, Manning was sentenced to 35 years in prison for providing more than 700,000 documents, videos, diplomatic cables and battlefield accounts to WikiLeaks in the biggest breach of classified materials in U.S. history.

Hillary Clinton didn't suffer brain damage: Bill Clinton

Potential Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton did not suffer brain damage from a 2012 blood clot, her husband said on Wednesday.

The New York Post reported on Monday that top Republican strategist Karl Rove suggested last week at a conference that Hillary Clinton suffered a brain injury.

Former President Bill Clinton said this was not the case.

"There is nothing to it," the former president told a conference in Washington.

Hillary Clinton suffered a blood clot in her head in December 2012 after a fall at her home and received several days of treatment at a New York hospital. The incident raised health concerns for Clinton, who was a widely traveled secretary of state for President Barack Obama.

Her husband, who was president from 1993 to 2001, said she was in vigorous health and exercised regularly. REUTERS

Senate Dems offer bill on refinancing of student debt

U.S. Senate Democrats unveiled legislation on Wednesday to allow millions of Americans with student loan debt to refinance at lower interest rates.

Democrats said their measure would let holders of both federal and private undergraduate loans – some with rates of up to 8 and 9 percent and more – to refinance at 3.86 percent.

Drafted in coordination with the White House, the bill is part of Senate Democrats' 2014 legislative agenda aimed at giving all Americans "a fair shot" and rallying the party's liberal base before the November elections. REUTERS

World Health Organization assistant director-general for health security Keiji Fukuda, center, speaks with a journalist on Wednesday in Geneva at the end of a press conference following a closed-door emergency talks on the deadly MERS virus. / GETTY IMAGES

WHO: MERS virus does not constitute a global emergency

Deadly. MERS, a cousin of SARS, kills about 30 percent of those infected.

Concern about the deadly new Middle East Respiratory Syndrome virus has "significantly increased" but the disease does not yet constitute a global public health emergency, the World Health Organization said on Wednesday.

The virus, which causes coughing, fever and sometimes fatal pneumonia, has been reported in more than 500 patients in Saudi Arabia alone and has spread to neighboring countries and in a few cases, to Europe, Asia and the U.S. It kills about 30 percent of those who are infected.

The WHO's emergency committee, which met on Tuesday, said on Wednesday that based on current information, the seriousness of the situation had increased in terms of public health impact, but that there is no evidence of sustained human-to-human transmission of the virus. REUTERS

Quoted

"The committee concluded that the conditions for a Public Health Emergency of International Concern have not yet been met."

World Health Organization said in a statement

MERS patient sat in ER for hours

The second U.S. patient to be diagnosed with the deadly MERS spent at least four hours in the public waiting room of a busy Florida emergency department before he was seen by a doctor, a hospital official said.

Almost eight more hours passed before staff at Orlando's Dr. P. Phillips Hospital determined the patient had traveled from Saudi Arabia, where he worked at a hospital, began to suspect his exposure to MERS and had him moved to an isolation room, the hospital's chief quality control officer said.

The official, Dr. Antonio Crespo, said that as of Tuesday, he had changed procedures in the emergency department of Dr. P. Phillips Hospital so that any patient who comes in with flu-like symptoms will be asked whether they traveled to Saudi Arabia or other countries experiencing MERS outbreaks.

"That is one of the learning lessons of this experience. Yes, we could have asked this sooner. I think we have created more awareness," Crespo told Reuters in an interview. REUTERS

Sick hospital workers test negative

Two U.S. hospital workers who fell ill after contact with a patient suffering from MERS have tested negative for the often-deadly virus, a Florida health official said on Wednesday.

U.S. health officials had recently confirmed the country's first two cases of MERS since late April, raising fears about the global spread of the virus responsible for a worsening outbreak in Saudi Arabia. REUTERS

Death toll rises. Hope fades for survivors in Turkish mine fire

A miner is carried to an ambulance as a relative looks on on Wednesday in Soma, Turkey. / GETTY IMAGES

Hopes faded of finding more survivors in a coal mine in western Turkey on Wednesday, where 245 workers were confirmed killed and around 120 still feared to be trapped in what is likely to prove the nation's worst ever industrial disaster.

Anger over the deadly fire at the mine about 300 miles southwest of Istanbul echoed across a country that has seen a decade of rapid economic growth but still suffers from one of the world's worst workplace safety records.

Opponents blamed Prime Minister Tayyip Erdogan's government for privatizing the country's mines and ignoring repeated warnings about their safety.

"We as a nation of 77 million are experiencing a very great pain," Erdogan told a news conference after visiting the site. But he appeared to turn defensive when asked whether sufficient precautions had been in place at the mine.

"Explosions like this in these mines happen all the time. It's not like these don't happen elsewhere in the world," he said, reeling off a list of global mining accidents since 1862. REUTERS

Nigeria rejects schoolgirl prisoner swap

Nigeria's President Goodluck Jonathan has rejected the idea of a swap of Boko Haram prisoners for schoolgirls who were kidnapped by the Islamist group a month ago, Britain's minister for Africa said after talks with him in Abuja on Wednesday.

"He made it very clear that there would be no negotiations with Boko Haram that involved a swap of abducted schoolgirls for prisoners," Mark Simmonds told a news conference.

The Islamist group, which is holding more than 200 girls, posted a video on Monday offering to release them in exchange for prisoners held by the government.

Boko Haram militants fighting for an Islamic state stormed a school in the village of Chibok on April 14 and seized 276 girls. REUTERS

Court orders Pistorius to undergo mental evaluation

A South African court on Wednesday ordered Olympic and Paralympic track star Oscar Pistorius to undergo evaluation for mental illness — a move which could determine whether he lacked criminal capacity when he shot dead his girlfriend. The prosecution had asked for the evaluation after a psychiatrist told the court on Monday that Pistorius, who is on trial for the murder of Reeva Steenkamp on Feb. 14 last year, suffered from an anxiety disorder. Prosecutor Gerrie Nel has argued he wanted to prevent the 27-year-old sprinter, who faces life in prison if convicted, from later appealing on the basis of a disturbed mental condition. Looking up to Nicole Kidman

Nicole Kidman and a much-shorter Tim Roth posed for a photo for their new film, "Grace of Monaco," about Grace Kelly at the 67th Annual Cannes Film Festival on Wednesday. Everyone has their fingers crossed it will be better than last year's bomb about a blond royal, the Naomi Watts-starring "Diana." MIKE MARSLAND, WIREIMAGE

Today in popular TV news

It's upfront week! The week when networks showcase their fall and midseason shows to attract advertisers, but which also serve as indicators of what shows will be on the air. Here's some of the biggest bits:

Shonda Rimes, the creator of "Grey's Anatomy" and "Scandal," inked an eight-figure deal with ABC for a full night of programming on Thursdays. Starting in the fall, her "Grey's" will move to 8 p.m., while "Scandal" moves to 9 p.m. in order to launch her new drama, "How to Get Away with Murder."

Next fall will see the final season of "Two and a Half Men." After 12 very expensive yet very popular seasons, it will come to a close. The Ashton Kutcher and Jon Cryer comedy's final outing will be a "season-long finale event," Nina Tassler, the president of CBS, said. We're curious if the original "half" man, Angus T. Jones, will return for this "finale event" after leaving the show and calling it "filth."

TBS announced yesterday that their late-night star, Conan O'Brien, has signed on for four more years. We can't wait to not watch him for the next four years. We love you, Conan, but it's still TBS!

Also, Elsa from "Frozen" will be a character on "Once Upon a Time" next season. Sorry, now you have "Let It Go" stuck in your head, don't you?

Bieber's latest altercation with someone

Justin Bieber is under investigation by the LAPD for robbery charges after an altercation with a 13-year-old fan's mother at a L.A.-area miniature golf course earlier this week, according to the Huffington Post. Bieber allegedly accosted the older woman after noticing her snap photos of him with her cell phone, insisting she erase the photos. When she refused to comply, Bieber reportedly "ripped" the phone "out of her hands," only to find it locked. Bieber eventually gave the phone back, but not before chastising the woman, telling her she was embarrassing herself in front of her daughter, who was in tears at that point. So far, the pop star "hasn't been arrested or questioned," police officials say. "It's too preliminary."

Lake Bell is known for comic acting, in "It's Complicated" and "No Strings Attached," as well as for writing, directing and starring in last year's "In a World..." But "Million Dollar Arm" producer Joe Roth likens his casting of her as Jon Hamm's love interest in the true baseball tale to when he cast an unknown Sandra Bullock in "While You Were Sleeping" nearly 20 years ago. "She's got a great career in front of her," Roth says. So, no pressure, right Lake?

sports movie or Disney movie, the first name that comes to your mind is Lake Bell.
Thank you. By the way, correct. You are right. I am, like, the go-to. [Laughs] That's me.

I was actually wondering, after Joe Roth made the Sandra Bullock comparison at today's press conference, if you're feeling any extra career pressure already.
I was like, "Damn, Joe." We'll see how that plays out. [Laughs] No, I was hugely flattered, just because obviously I love Sandra Bullock and she's fantastic. I love her both personally and her work. But no, I don't feel any pressure. I think he might feel pressure now. I'm like, "So, what are we doing? What's the next deal? Let's get some 'Speed' money." [Laughs] But no, it was hugely complimentary. And it legitimately made me blush.

You have such a great, easy time riffing with Jon Hamm.
Jon and I are lucky because we've been pals for such a long time, though this is the first time that we got to do a movie together. We do "Children's Hospital," but he just rolls in when he wants to for an episode here or there while we're doing the show. This was fun because we were on equal ground in scenes and got to sink our teeth into something. But yeah, I think that kind of banter is something that we both enjoy.

In her own hands

Behind the lens

How do you scout out acting work around your own projects, now that you're directing as well?
The good news for me is that it takes a while to procure a project that you're going to direct. After "In a World..." first came out, there was a barrage of opportunities, and that's a beautiful, profound thing — especially coming out of something that you bore yourself. It's moving to think, "Oh my God, this really changed my life, and I did it for myself."

But that said, I think because I'm in my 30s I'm not so wooed by an opportunity that I have no respect for the process. Making a movie does take years, you know? Maybe some people are more prolific in being able to churn out a movie a year. At this particular juncture, I don't have that yet.

You don't feel any sort of deadline pressure from other people on your team?
I put my own deadlines to myself. I have the luxury of being an actor first and foremost, so it makes writing still fun for me because the deadlines are a little looser. I prefer to take my time and make it awesome than rush into it because somebody's going to forget my name as a director. It's not worth it.

2 'Million Dollar Arm' Jon Hamm transfers his workaholic routine to the big screen, playing a sports agent whose get-rich-quick scheme involves heading to India to find out if any cricket players might be turned into killer baseball pitchers.

3 'The Immigrant' The last time Joaquin Phoenix and director James Gray collaborated (on "Two Lovers"), the former sabotaged the press tour by doing his fake-rapper shtick. Reunited, they head back to 1921 NYC, with Phoenix's pimp joining up with a Polish woman (Marion Cotillard).

4 'Ai Weiwei: The Fake Case' Last documented in "Ai Weiwei: Never Sorry," the Chinese artist and activist returns to film. This installment shows his experience living under house arrest for the antics from the previous film.

Roaring back

'Godzilla'

1 Serious for the first time since the 1954 original, the rampaging, fire-breathing lizard gets rebooted, this time squaring off against an overqualified cast that includes Elizabeth Olsen, Sally Hawkins, Bryan Cranston and freakin' Juliette Binoche.

Godzilla is looking pretty good for being 60 years old this year. / WARNER BROS. PICTURES

5 'Wolf Creek 2' A noted member of the so-called "torture porn" craze, 2005's Aussie grinder gets a belated sequel. This time the "Crocodile" Dundee-style monster (John Jarratt) gets to mess up a whole new pair of tourists in ways that will probably make you cry.

6 'Chinese Puzzle' The French dramas "L'Auberge Espagnole" and "Russian Dolls" get a three-equel, this one following the ensemble of onetime youths — among them Audrey Tautou, Romain Duris and Cecile de France — relocating to New York City.

7 'The Discoverers' Mostly busy these days with supporting turns (in "Dallas Buyers Club") and directing, the great Griffin Dunne returns to playing exasperated lead, as seen in Martin Scorsese's "After Hours," with this indie about a historian forced to drag his kids to a historical re-creation camp.

8 'Neighbors' Seth Rogen is getting old (OK, he's 32), which means it's time for him to play a new dad squaring off against the hard-partying frat that's moved in next door, led by young kid Zac Efron (OK, he's 26).

9 'The Amazing Spider-Man 2' The second in a reboot of a franchise that happened only last decade deviates from the originals, having Andrew Garfield's Spidey fight Electro (Jamie Foxx) and — oh wait, Green Goblin (Dane DeHaan) is here too. That's not new.

How to create the perfect online dating profile

See more at www.metro.us

Love. We talk to an expert about the do's and don'ts of Internet dating.

These tips will help you tweak your online dating profile. / BLEND IMAGES

The sometimes crazy world of online dating can be daunting to navigate at times. In his new ebook, "Poke Me: A No-Nonsense Guide to Online Dating and Offline Loving," author Kabir Chopra shows you how to create the perfect profile to showcase your unique personality. Here's what he had to say about that all-important first message, how to pick the perfect profile photo and the one mistake all online daters should avoid.

What's the one mistake that online daters seem to make the most?
The No. 1 mistake is that people are not highlighting their personalities in their profiles. Some people are still shy about online dating, so they are very skimpy in their responses. But the profile questions give you the opportunity to show your passions. It's a missed opportunity to not tell others enough about yourself.

Describe what makes a good profile pic.
It should be a good-quality image and well-lit with a nice background. You should be the center of attention in the photo.

Can you give readers some advice about how to write a good first message?
Focus on whatever popped out at you about this particular profile. Basically, you want the person you are messaging to know that one, you are a normal person who has actually read their profile and two, that you have mentioned whatever appealed to you.

How many photos should you include in a profile?
I would say 5 is a good number. You should use photos of yourself in different environments, and using one or two selfies are OK. If you are outdoorsy, take a photo outdoors. If you like biking, use a photo of you on your bike. And this should be self-explanatory, but you should look good in all of the photos and have a nice smile.

Tip

And what's the one photo you absolutely shouldn't use?
If you are a guy, don't use pictures of you with lots of other girls. It makes you look like a player and turns women off. With girls, it's basically the same thing. You don't want to give off the impression that you already have a boyfriend or girlfriend.

What happens when she makes more than you

More women than ever are earning more than their partners, which sometimes creates relationship challenges. / GOODSHOT

Relationships. These women bring home the bacon and fry it up in a pan.

Twenty-something media executive Amanda Jones* has it all: loving husband, successful career and oh yeah, resentment. As he studies in medical school, she toils at the office, carrying the financial burden for both of them. While Jones considers herself a "completely modern woman," there's still "the fantasy of having your partner take care of you financially that nags at you in the background."

She admits, "I would be lying if I didn't say that I sometimes feel resentful. Doesn't everyone want to be taken care of?"

At the end of a tedious day, they're both exhausted and when they order take-out, she's expected to pay for it, Jones says. Although it's for the short term, as he'll eventually be a high earner (that is, after his four-year residency), she's been the high earner for several years now.

He doesn't like the situation either, especially since it's usually the first thing she mentions in fights. "I know he gets resentful that he does more chores than I do, but given what I spend on him, I sort of feel like it's even!" she says.

Jones isn't alone. Farnoosh Torabi's new book, "When She Makes More," addresses this growing trend. Since Torabi's the top earner in her household, the author and finance expert notes, "Society has yet to really embrace women as heads of households. For me, that was a lightbulb moment."

Her goal? To eliminate the feeling of "confusion, guilt and feeling less than." Torabi wants to celebrate these women: "I want to have others be proud of it and really own it."

And owning it should start early. "Men and women both need to be able to show up as their authentic selves in a relationship," says Megan Dalla-Camina, author of "Getting Real About Having It All."

It's not uncommon for women to take on so-called masculine qualities to become the alpha female. Dalla-Camina explains that men may start wondering about what role they'll play. "It's about how people show up and what energy they bring and how it either balances out in the relationship or doesn't."

The key is for both partners to have an active role in their relationship and household. "That's teamwork," says Torabi. "Sometimes we forget that when we're bringing home the bigger paycheck, we assume all the authority."

Power dating tips

For women:

- Don't dumb down. "A woman should feel never like she has to play small to make the man in her life feel more important. This is not the 1960s," says Dalla-Camina.
- Don't fish in the wrong pond. Go after a guy at your level. Titus explains, "Don't settle for somebody because you think he's cute or funny – there are cuter, funnier and more secure guys out there."

For men:

- Acknowledge that her career goals are important but that having a relationship that's a partnership will ultimately get both of you to where you really want to go.
- Make collaborative decisions. Just because you earn more doesn't mean your job is more important or your time is more valuable.

Barchetta

Chef Dave Pasternack (Esca) brings his upscale, approachable seafood to Chelsea. Already popular is the two-flight, six-item crudo tasting ($30), but look for pasta and meat dishes as well as other seafood standouts. 461 W. 23rd St., 212- 255-7400

Beautique

Steps away from the Paris Theater and Plaza Hotel in Midtown is Beautique, a new modern American eatery with a Parisian feel. Chef Craig Hopson (formerly of Le Cirque) leads the kitchen, and the super-talented Charlotte Voisey has created of cocktail menu of delightfully named libations. 8 W. 58th St., 212-753-1200

El Vez

Philadelphia's Stephen Starr, who brought Buddakan and Morimoto to the Big Apple, is making his mark on Battery Park City with El Vez. Spacious and soulful, the downtown space will no doubt accommodate the families that live nearby, but the Mexican food and drink will draw everyone else. "Battery Park City's dining scene is ready for innovation and excitement," says Starr. 259 Vesey St., 212-233-2500

Heartwood

A mini dream team, in the form of James Beard Award-winning chef Bradford Thompson, Boulanger Mark Fiorentino (formerly of Daniel Boulud's restaurants) and Nick Mautone (formerly of Gramercy Tavern), is the force behind this new spot housed in the former Donatella space. Their focus will be on seasonal and local fare as well as house-made pizzas. 184 Eighth Ave., 212-493-5150

Bill Murray is Feeling awfully Gloomy

Saturday, 11 p.m.
The Grand Victory
245 Grand St., Brooklyn
$6, 347-529-6610
www.thegrandvictory.com
The Gloom Brothers have decided to take their sad party of songs that have people dancing in tears and introduce Bill Murray into the picture. DJs Gordon and Nathaniel Gloom will be playing tacks from some classic Bill Murray flicks to celebrate some of the sad saps he's played over the years. Plus there will be a sing-along, a Bill Murray costume contest, photos with a Bill Murray look-alike and more.

COMEDY

The Laughing Devil Comedy Festival

Tonight-May 18
Various locations
$20, www.devilfestival.com
The Laughing Devil Comedy Festival takes over eight clubs with 100 comedians from all over North America competing for huge prizes and a chance to showcase their stuff for TV and film. A portion of the proceeds will benefit the Lenny Bruce Memorial Foundation.

www.milkbarstore.com
Hang with the gang from Stumptown and learn the intricacies of making the perfect cold brew. In addition to sampling the coffee in all its cool deliciousness, the Milk Bar will be serving some of its own crowd pleasers, including cornflake chocolate chip marshmallow cookies and crack pie slices. JAY HONSTETTER

PARTY

Hey! Ho! Let's go ... celebrate the late, great Joey Ramone's birthday. / GETTY IMAGES

Joey Ramone Birthday Bash!

May 19, 6:30 p.m.
Bowery Electric, 327 Bowery; $25-$30, 212-228-0228
The Ramones will forever be remembered as the coolest NYC punk rock band to come out of CBGBs — don't just take our word for it, ask Riff Randell. On what would have been Joey Ramone's 61st birthday, The Joey Ramone Tribute Band, featuring members of the Sex Pistols and the Dead Boys, will celebrate the legend with tons of special guests. Throw on your leather jacket and get ready to party like it's 1978. All net proceeds will benefit the Joey Ramone Foundation for Lymphoma Research.

Horoscope

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Confusion, mistakes and a lack of control could be problems for you today. Remain diligent at work.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. You will capture the attention of your superiors. Show how much of a team player you can be. Make suggestions that are sure to improve the workplace.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Someone close to you may be deceptive. Don't let your anger get the better of you. Try to pinpoint the source of the problem and work it out together.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. You will have to make some compromises to stay in good graces. Someone will feel that you've failed to be attentive or caring.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Children and loved ones should be included in your plans. Find something physical to participate in.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Proceed with caution when using mechanical devices. You'll encounter problems if you take a shortcut.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Emphasize your best traits when dealing with superiors. Develop a closer rapport with those in a position to further your interests.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. You need to make big decisions without getting flustered. It may not be as difficult as you imagine.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Expand your circle of friends. Stimulate your curiosity by visiting different locations. Make the most of an opportunity.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Someone may feel left out if you are too busy with work. Take time to listen and offer suggestions. Dividing your time between work and home will lead to success. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Less debate about climate

Maybe Metro should spend less time incessantly publishing opposing views on climate change and post letters on other problems affecting the U.S., such as an educational system that is not even in the Top 20 in the world and the fact that the economy is creating so few jobs and that birth rates of the lower-income people are so high that about 46 million people are on food stamps.
RON FALCON, VIA EMAIL

Climate isn't political

Actually, global temperatures are both natural from plants and biosphere, man-made, and, yes, even animal-made. Aloof Republicans joke that cow farts contribute methane to the atmosphere. But none of this matters. It comes to one basic principle as mentioned in the Constitution's Preamble: the welfare of the people. That's why the government needs to act now. The common good requires an environment. Even President Nixon knew that when he motivated Congress to adopt the EPA.
ARTHUR BLENHEIM, VIA EMAIL

Nets season ends in late-game collapse

NBA playoffs. The Heat finished its Game 5 win with a 13-3 run to bring the Nets' season to an ugly close.

Joe Johnson, left, gave a Herculean effort in Game 5, while Paul Pierce, right, might have played his last game with the Nets. / GETTY IMAGES

The Nets couldn't figure out a way to finish a game and now their season is finished.

Miami beat Brooklyn, 96-94, in Game 5 to win the Eastern Conference semifinal series, 4-1.

Brooklyn, the highest-paid team in NBA history, will have a long offseason ahead of them.

The Nets led by nine with 4:48 remaining, but Mirza Teletovic missed two ill-advised 3-pointers and the Heat went on a 12-0 run to pull ahead, 95-91.

Joe Johnson made a 3-pointer to pull within one, but Johnson couldn't even get a shot off to tie or take the lead after LeBron James split a pair of free throws.

The Heat opened the fourth quarter with back-to-back 3-pointers by Rashard Lewis and James, but the Nets answered with a 7-1 run to push the lead back to nine points.

The momentum appeared ready to swing back to Miami when Paul Pierce picked up an offensive foul on an illegal screen with 5:56 remaining. But Johnson hit a floater in the lane while being fouled and completed the old-fashioned three-point play.

Johnson led the Nets with 34 points, while James had 29 points and nine rebounds for the Heat.

By the numbers

The Heat have closed out their last seven series in which they led 3-1 by winning Game 5. All seven of those games have come during the "Big 3" era of LeBron James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh.

Whats next?

WOULD SOME TEAM TAKE GARNETT FOR A SEASON?
GETTY IMAGES

1 Truth or dare
When the Nets traded for Paul Pierce last offseason they knew he was in the final year of his deal. They hoped for a title win, but at least a near miss might convince him to stay. It seems unlikely he will be back, though, with the opportunity to join a team much closer to a title — maybe even his old coach with the Clippers.

2 Getting younger
The Nets have no first-round draft pick in 2014, thanks to that Celtics trade, but they need to get younger. Kevin Garnett is still under contract one more season, but that could make his expiring contract desirable.

3 What about Brook?
There is no question the team took off after Brook Lopez was done for the season. Head coach Jason Kidd has been clear he doesn't want a plodding team. If he's healthy, the team needs to figure out how it wants to play. METRO

Pistons hire Van Gundy

Stan Van Gundy chose Detroit real estate over the Bay Area, signing to become head coach and president of the Pistons on Wednesday. The former Magic and Heat coach had been pursued by the Warriors as well. But he'll have say over personnel decisions in Detroit.
